In our PhD and Postdoc Breakfast Club event for April, we welcome Hannah Mülder , Doctoral Research Fellow at the Department of Education, University of Oslo. With a background in interdisciplinary engineering and statistics, Hannah investigates student partnership, quality, and educational development in higher education.

In this interactive session titled "Being a Supervisor – Using Insights from Research to Reflect on Our Role" , Hannah will explore supervision from the perspective of the supervisee. Drawing on research, personal experiences, and reflections, she invites us to consider how understanding ourselves as supervisees can give us more agency and allow us to co-create this essential relationship. We'll reflect together, share stories, and dig into what makes the PhD-supervisor connection thrive.
